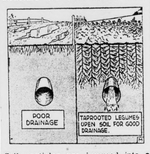
Poor Soil Drainage Is Serious Symptom

Too Few Legumes May Aggravate the Problem

If your once well drained soil is clogged up, don't put all the blame on your drain tile system. The poor drainage may be due to damaged soil structure and loss of organic matter caused by overcropping.

Too many grain crops year after year and too few deep-rooted legumes in the rotation have slowed drainage down to a "walk" on thousands of farms. Failure to return plant nutrients, manure and crop residues to the soil have aggravated the problem.

On such land the cushiony soil structure has been broken down.



Soil particles are jammed into a hard, compact mass, instead of clustering together in loose granules. Circulation of air and moisture is cut off. Water ponds on the surface instead of soaking in. Roots are up against a "concrete floor" that stops them from stretching out for needed nutrients. Crop yields are low.

For unclogging poorly drained soils, deep-rooted legumes such as alfalfa and sweet clover are particularly important. The tap-roots open up tightly-packed soil and let water soak in faster. When well fed with phosphate and potash the roots put mineralized organic matter deep into the subsoil.

The organic matter added by roots and tops of legumes, manure and crop residues contains compounds that stick soil particles together in clusters. That makes good tilth and a loose, well-drained soil.

The organic matter helps the soil hold more water longer. Roots find it easy to get at moisture and plant nutrients. Crop yields increase.

Postoffice Tries to Deliver Letter Written in 1862

DETROIT.—The postoffice is trying to deliver a letter written in 1862 to a Detroit woman.

The brittle, faded letter was found behind an old mantel in a Cleveland house being remodeled. It was addressed to Mrs. H. R. Leonard, 65 Stimpson place, Detroit.

The letter said, "John has had a fever for two days now and I am afraid he is going to be sick," and was signed "Hattie."

Postoffice officials admitted it would be difficult to deliver the 66-year-old letter because there no longer is a "65 Stimpson place" in Detroit and the city engineer's office doubts if there ever was.

Why Dutch is Growing a Beard

That beard on Dutch Miller's chin doesn't mean that he's getting ready to play Santa Claus. He's simply paying off the election bet he lost to Cappy Swanson.

And while some folks allow it's all a lot of nonsense — like the wheelbarrow ride that Cappy had to give Dutch after last election day—from where I sit, it's a mighty wholesome aftermath to a difference of opinion.

Because good Americans all take their politics and voting mighty seriously. But when the issue's settled, and the die is cast, the accept the verdict in a spirit good humor.

And that's as it should be wh it comes to any difference of opi ion. Some folks vote for beer a their favorite beverage—oth vote for cider. In fact, we all ha differences of taste in almost eve thing! But that doesn't mean th we can't live together in a spirit good fellowship.

Loan Shop Owner Discovers Bargain Furs Are Expensive

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. — Max Sacks was sad. Those two $250 fur scarves he bought for $30 each had been such bargains too.

Detective Sgts. George Hubbard and Ernest Hughes said Sacks, proprietor of a loan company, told them a man came in some time ago offering a scarf he said was worth $250 for $30. Sacks bought it. Some time later the same man came back with another—also valued at $250.

The scarf man returned to the loan company a third time. Sacks, suspicious, whispered to the detectives, who were in his office. They arrested the man on a vagrancy charge.

Detectives listened to his story and then arrested his former wife on a vagrancy charge. Sacks was surprised when he learned her identity.

The woman, he told detectives, was his employee and the scarves he had bought were from his own vault.

Early Egg-Laying Cited As Not Good for Hens

Healthy pullets can be fed to induce the starting of egg-laying during the fourth month, but experienced poultrymen usually avoid this early production on the theory that such pullets do not make as large or rugged hens.

Egg size continues to be small for a longer period where pullets are encouraged to lay early, thus reducing long-range profits through premature development.
